Nightingale To Exhibit at Orgatec 2006

October 17, 2006 – Nightingale, an innovative ISO 9002 manufacturer of contract office seating since 1928, today announced that it will be showcasing its premiere XO Collection chair series, at Orgatec in Cologne, Germany, October 24-28, 2006.

Nightingale will be predominately displayed in Hall 10.1, Aisle A, Booth # 033.

Orgatec is the world's largest industry trade show held over five days in Cologne, Germany. It is a great opportunity to view all the latest products and ideas from some of the biggest and brightest furniture companies in the world. The products shown at Orgatec often define the trends for the future.

"Nightingale is proudly represented with the XO Collection in over 20 international countries including the UK, Mexico, Brazil, Australia, New Zealand, Hong Kong, China, UAE, Middle East and more. The CXO, SXO, and LXO were designed to be the most comfortable comprehensive chair series in the world. The success of these chairs both in the North American market and the International market speaks well to its universal design, features and comfort" says Ed Breen, Vice-President.

From the very first patented chair in 1928 through to today, Nightingale has continuously designed, and manufactured patented office seating solutions. It has remained true to its founder's core beliefs that all Nightingale chairs be designed and manufactured with the clients comfort in mind while exceeding the highest quality standards. Today, Nightingale's product line of office seating consists of over 60 product series including task, stackable, management, executive, conference, lounge, children's, healthcare, and educational applications.

Nightingale's history of employee participation and ownership and technological innovation has long roots and continues to grow. Nightingale has always worked hard to be serious about both people and business. It looks upon its primary goal as creating comfortable and great places to work.

Good things are happening at Nightingale.
